Original Poetry.

For the Republican.

THE MODEL HUSBAND.

BY BECKIE HARRIS.

The model husband goes to "club,"
But six nights in a week—
Done up in fashion's fitting tights,
And boots that loudly squeak.

This bundle, wrapped in broadcloth fine,
Walks under a plug hat;
To meet his friends—at social wine,
And have a social chat.

At twelve p. m., he returns home,
Supported by his cane;
Nodding this way, then that, he'll roam
To his brown front on Main.

He staggers up the steps—then calls,
The name he once adored;
Her wearied form flies through the halls,
To find him thus deplored.

And she assists him to his room,
With tear-stained cheek and eyes;
But one night's sleep will reform him,
And in the morn he'll rise.

And scorn the hand, because its white,
That cooled his burning face;
And frown on her because she'll dare
To wear a bit of lace.

He'll then advise unmarried men,
(And sway his jewelled staff,)
To choose some worthy diadem,
To be their "better half."

Who will not deign to snuff or fret,
About her lonely life;
But gladly take just what she'll get,
This best, yes, "the best wife."

Select Miscellany.

Becky Harland's Place.

BY AMY RANDOLPH.

"I don't know whether you will suit me or not," said Towers, reflectively.

"I will do my best, ma'am," said little Becky.

"Any objections to the country?" demanded Miss Towers, in a brusque, business-like way.

"No, ma'am."

"I have never kept a girl before," said Miss Towers, gravely, "but my brother is coming home this summer, and I don't want to be obliged to be in the kitchen the whole time. Where have you lived last?"

Becky Harland grew pink all over.

"I have never lived out before ma'am, but my uncle died suddenly, and there was no more than enough left to support my aunt, so I'm going to try to support myself."

"Very right and proper," said Miss Towers "Well, Rebecca, I will try you at all events. Six dollars a month is very moderate wages, and although you don't look real stout, yet I think I can make you very useful about the house."

So Miss Towers took Beckie Harland back with her to the old stone farm house in the Housatonic valley. And Becky was never tired of helping Miss Towers strain the milk and work over the butter, and gather pink honeysuckles, and feed the little down turkeys. And the roses in her cheeks grew deeper and the velvet bloom on her lips seemed to catch the scarlet of the wood strawberries, and Miss Towers declared, with an admiring glance at her little "help," that "she didn't look like the same child she was before, that she didn't."

Meanwhile the preparations for Miss Towers' "brother" went briskly on.

"I'll make up a lot of cocoanut pound cake," Miss Towers said, with the recipe book in her hand. "That's what he used to be desperate fond of when he was a boy."

"Perhaps his tastes have changed." said Becky, who was rubbing the old mahogany furniture with a waxed cloth, at the other end of the room.

"I don't know about that" said Miss Towers, with a troubled air. "I have'nt seen him since!"

"Not seen him since he was a boy!" echoed Becky, with wide open blue eyes.

"Well, it does sound strange, don't it?" said Miss Towers; "but you see he went away from home when he was fifteen and he's been out in the world ever since!"

"Is he a very old gentleman. Miss Towers?" innocently questioned Rebecca as she rubbed away at the claw foot of an antique pier table.

"Old!" echoed Miss Towers, uplifting both hands in amazement. "Why, he's ever so much younger than I am."

"Is he?" asked Becky. "Why, I've been fancying him, all along, an old gentleman in a wig and cane."

Miss Towers burst into a fit of hearty laughter.

"Well, if that don't beat all!" she cried, wiping the tears from under her spectacle glasses. "But, after all, to a stranger that didn't know the family story, it might very easily appear so. You see, child, my mother was a widow when she married for the second time, and—dear heart alive, what is that little turkey chick queaking like a possessed creature? Run, Rebecca and see.—I'm afraid the old speckled hen has broken her string, and is worrying it."

Rebecca was sitting in the twilight on the door stone that evening, one cheek resting on her hand, and her eyes dreamily fixed on the far-off wall of woods, growing purple in the coming dusk.—Miss Towers had gone to carry a basket of her ripest Wilson strawberries to a sick neighbor, and Becky was all alone, thinking over her past, and pondering vaguely on her future.

"How strange it seems that I should be here," she thought, "when it is scarcely a year since I was the gayest little butterfly in all the city ball rooms! The echoes of those old waltzes and gallops come back to me sometimes, when I am just falling asleep with the moonlight upon my face, and the maple leaves rustling softly at my open casement; and yet I am happier here. That is, I should be, if I could only forget one thing. I wonder what girls want to be so fitful and capricious for? Oh! dear," and Becky's blue eyes swam with tears as she remembered the handsome lover who had been so true and faithful and constant until her own coquetry had driven him away from her side. "I would so like to know what Colonel Falconer is doing now, and whether he is married yet, and if he ever thinks of me. I would write to him if I were Miss Harland, the petted heiress still; but little Becky who does house work for her daily bread—ah, never, never!"

And Becky, anxious to escape from her own haunting thoughts, jumped up and ran across the dewy meadow to meet Miss Towers, whose tall, angular figure was just coming in sight round the curve of the maple swamp.

"Bless and save the child!" cried Miss Towers. "Why, Rebecca, you ain't afraid?"

"No—yes—I don't know. Let me carry your basket, please."

"Rebecca," cried the old lady, next morning, as she drove the shaggy little pony into the door yard, returning from the village post office, "I've got a letter. He's coming to night."

"Is he?" said the girl, smiling because Miss Towers' face was so radiant. "Then I'd better run out in the garden and gather a fresh lot of strawberries before the sun gets any higher.

"Yes, run along; and remember, Rebecca, all what I have told you about sitting quiet and never disturb him when he wants to write, and speaking very low, and keeping out of his way, except when you are wanted, for he has just come from England where they are very particular about servants."

"Yes, ma'am, I will remember," she made answer, meekly, and folded up Miss Towers' black barege shawl, while that lady hurried out into the kitchen to see whether the fire was in a proper condition for the baking of divers and sundry savory compounds designed to tempt the appetite of the expected guest.

"I wish he wasn't coming," thought our Becky. "We have been so happy together all the summer, and now—"

But Miss Towers' voice, shrilly calling to Becky to come and stone raisins for her, interrupted the disconnected fragment of a reverie into which she had fallen.

Miss Towers was arrayed like unto lilies of the field in her steel-colored silk-dress—ours mile applies to the general gorgeousness of the apparel, not its color merely—and white satin ribbons in her cap, when the stage rumbled into sight round the corner of the fence, where a huge willow waved its green banner, shutting off all outside view beyond its streaming boughs.

Little Becky Harland, who had been on the qui vive at the garret window, came flying down stairs like a thistle-down by the summer's breeze.

"Oh, Miss Towers! Miss Towers! there is a gentleman all alone on the back seat of the stage, and I am sure it must be Mr. Towers!"

"Mr. Towers!" replied the old lady, in an accent almost of irritation. "Why, Rebecca, I'm sure I've told you that his name isn't Towers; it is—"

But here she broke short off, hurrying to the front door to greet the new comer, while Becky, in an unaccountable fit of shyness, shrank back into the corner and looked up into the picture of Naomi and Ruth that hung over the mantlepiece.

"I wish he hadn't come! I wish he hadn't come!" repeated Becky over and over to herself. "We were so happy before!"

And then remembering Miss Towers' judicious advice as to keeping out of the way except when she was wanted, Becky turned to escape out among her friends, the downy chickens, at the south door; but to her indefinite discomfiture, just as she opened the door, Miss Towers' steel colored silk rustled up to the threshold, with a tall stately figure by her side, and poor little Becky came face to face with them, her cheeks dyed scarlet, and her red brown hair dishevelled by her haste, yet looking wonderfully pretty withal.

"Rebecca!" slowly enunciated Miss Towers, in an accent betokening a sort of mild displeasure.

But her tall companion, a man of about thirty-five, with dark grey eyes, hair black as raven's wing, and a face which, if not handsome, bore the exquisite outlines of refinement, had hastily passed her and entered the room.

Becky! my darling Becky!"

"Colonel Falconer!" was all the girl could gasp, so totally bewildered was she.

"Bless my soul!" ejaculated Miss Towers, rubbing her spectacles as if she would wear a hole in the crystal lenses; "however, di' Rebecca get acquainted with my brother?

"I was engaged to be married to him once, Miss Towers," said Becky, coloring and smiling, for there was something in Colonel Falconer's eyes that old her all the past was in a fair way to be forgiven.

"And she will be again, Eunice, unless I have lost all my old arts of persuasion," demurely added Colonel Falconer.

"But," cried Miss Towers, "why did'nt you tell me, Rebecca?"

"Because, Miss Towers," answered Becky, "I never dreamed for an instant that your brother's name was anything but Towers, or that Colonel Falconer could, by any possibility, be related to you.

"Well," cried Miss Towers, "if this don't beat all that I ever heard of—that Maurice Falconer should—dear me, there goes the kettle boiling over in the back kitchen!"

And away went Miss Towers, every housewifely instinct in her bosom roused by the sibilant sounds of the escaping clouds of vapor.

When she came back—it is but just to state that she stopped to take the two pans of buttermilk biscuit out of the oven and to reach down sundry tumblers of amber jelly from the top shelf in the cupboard—Colonel Falconer and Becky Harland were snug and confidential on the front porch. Becky blushed a little when Miss Towers came out, but she did not withdraw her hand from Maurice Falconer's.

"Well," said that lady, after a single keen glance through the gold spectacles, "I s'pose I shall lose my hired help."

"Yes, but then, sister Eunice," said the Colonel, "I shall gain such a sweet little wife."

"Is it really so?" said Miss Towers.

"Yes, it is really so," laughed Becky. "But oh, Miss Towers, I shall never in all my life forget how kind you have been to me."

And she stole up to Miss Towers and kissed her withered cheeks so fondly that the old lady had to wink hard to keep back her tears.

"Well, well, go along!" quoth the old lady. "I don't know that I blame you, Rebecca, or Maurice, either. Young folks will be young folks."

And she very sensibly went back to finish getting tea.

LIBERALITY.—What a blessing to tradesmen is a liberal customer! A farmer went into a store in Boston, the other day, and told the keeper that a neighbor of his entrusted him with some money to expend to the best advantage, and he meant to do it where he was best treated. He had been used very ill by the traders in Boston, and he would not part with his neighbor's money until he found a man who would treat him about right. With the utmost suavity, the trader says:

"I think I can treat you to your liking, how do you like to be treated?"

"Well," said the farmer, with a leer in his eye, "in the first place, I want a glass of toddy," which was forthcoming.

"Now, I will have a nice cigar," says the farmer.

It was promptly handed him, leisurely lighted, and then throwing himself back in a chair, with his feet as high as his head, he commenced puffing away like a Spaniard.

"Now, what do you want to purchase?" says the storekeeper.

"My neighbor handed me two cents when I left home, to buy him a plug of tobacco—have you got the article?"

The storekeeper sloped instanter.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.—The Mifflinburg Republican says: A few weeks ago Mr. John Dearing, jr., of Miltord township, this county, was in Patterson, and remained until after dark. He then started home, riding one mule and leading another. After riding some time he had occasion to get off, when the mule got frightened while his foot was yet in the stirrup, and ran off dragging him over the ground, which was hard and icy and rough for three miles to his father's house. In the fearful race he was dragged through Licking creek which was high and partly frozen. After reaching home he was dragged for some time about the barn yard, but the noise awakened the folks about the house, and he was finally released from his perilous condition. Dr. Graham, of Perrysville, was immediately sent for, when, strange to relate, no serious injury was found to have been inflicted. His clothes were torn entirely off his body, and at one place he was dragged through a pair of bars with two rails remaining in their place. It is, we think, the narrowest escape from death we have heard of for a long time.

SHREWD BOY.—"Harry, you ought not to throw away nice bread like that; you may want it some day." "Well, mother, should I stand any better chance of getting it then if I should eat it now?"

COURTING is an irregular active transitive verb, indicative mood, present tense, third person singular number, and agrees with all the girls—don't it?

THE other day a man was found mounted on a ladder with his lips pressed to the telegraph wires. He was kissing his wife in Albany "by telegraph."

"Is your master at home?" "No, sir; he's out." "Mistress at home?" "No, sir; she's out." "Then I'll stop in and sit by the fire." "That's out too."

IN making our arrangements to live, we should never forget that we have also to die.

"Strapped" Typos—A Sketch From Real Life.

Members of the "art preservative of all arts," like some persons connected with other pursuits in life, sometimes find themselves unfortunately, out of employment and devoid of means of support. As a class printers are of a roving disposition, and they not unfrequently quit a good job to run the chances of obtaining employment in a distant town or city. In this they sometimes fail, and are compelled to travel further, sometimes without money to pay their expenses.

Only a few days since a rather seedy looking typo appeared at the Government Printing Office and stalked up to Colonel Otis, the foreman of the office, with—

',I want to know if you can give me a job."

Foreman. Are you a printer?

Typo. Yes; I am.

Foreman. Where do you come from?

Typo, From anywhere—from everywhere in the United States.

Foreman (hurriedly). But where did you work last?

Typo. I have just come from Cheyonne, and I worked at Jefferson City, Terre Haute, Springfield, Cincinnati, New York, Baltimore and other places—I worked my passage. I have seventy cents in my pocket, and that is all. I want work, and if you can't give it to me say so, and I will travel on, for this old coat is getting devilish thin, and I must get down South where the climate will tally with the cost.

Colonel Otis gave the man a stand at once.

Queer fellows are some of those typos at the Government Printing Office. One was relating his experience and got it off in about this style, much to the amusement of his brother craftsmen:—

"I froze up in the North, you see"—

Fellow-compositor. How did you manage to freeze up there in the summer time?

Newly-arrived. Well, you see, 'way down in Maine I got out of work in the middle of the summer, and could get nothing to do but chop wood, and being out of money, I was what we call "froze up;" so I started South, and I "beat" the farmers for my meals and the railroad for my travel.

Another fellow-compositor. What do you mean when you say "beat?"

Newly-arrived. Why, I mean I got what I wanted and didn't pay a "red" for it. I stopped at one farmhouse and asked for something to eat, and the old chap said yes he would give me my breakfast if I would cut wood to get dinner with, and would give me dinner, too, if I would cut weed to get supper with. Well, you know I couldn't see that old cove, so I just "shook" him, and jogged along to the next farmhouse.

A compositor. You "shook" him! What do you mean by that?

Newly-arrived. Why I would not have anything to do with him. Nary a cut wood for me, for I had been travelling away from that institution for some time, had a lot of trouble, securing passage on the cars; but I "got at" one conductor between New York and Philadelphia.

A compositor. What do you mean by the phrase, "Got at?"

Newly-arrived. Well, you see, I just got ahead of him to his own satisfaction. When we got pretty well along from New York the conductor came to me with—

Your ticket, sir."

"I have none sir."

"You must pay your fare, then."

"I have no money, sir."

"Then you must be put off this car."

"Yes, sir."

The car was brought to a slow motion, I was led to the platform and requested to jump, and—well, I jumped.

It so happened that some defect was discovered about the locomotive, and it was some time before train got under way again. In the meantime I trudged onward about a mile and got to the next station just ahead of the train. When it came up I jumped on and resumed the very seat I was ejected from. By-and-by the conductor appeared again, and when he saw me he was rather amazed, and he ripped out an oath with the sharp inquiry:—

"Didn't I put you off this train just back here?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you got on again?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you want me to pitch you off and break your neck?"

"No, sir."

"Aint you a dead beat?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where are you going?"

"To Philadelphia, sir."

"Well, what would you do if I were to put you off again?"

"Get on the next train, sir."

"Well, if you are bound to go on these trains to Philadelphia in that way, I may as well take you myself."—Washington Chronicle.

BY HUGH JAMES BENFIN.

"And what glorious creatures were their daughters. The roses that bloomed upon their cheeks were of nature's own painting, and needed no touching up at the hands of art. Those damsels needed no patent springs to set off their forms to advantage. The modern art of 'stuffing' was a thing quite unknown, and when a young man got one of these peerless daughters of nature he knew there was no deception there. As to false calves, ha! ha! my friend the ones made by nature in those halcyon days beat the efforts of modern art. I was going to say, 'all hollow,' but that expression would be inaccurate as well as inelegant, besides, as I am a gentleman, I do not make use of slang. Hollow! No, indeed! they were as round and plump as the Queen of the Graces could desire, and such as—oh! dear how the young men did bless windy days!

"There was a flush of health in every face, a sparkle of life and happiness in every eye, a hint of ease and gracefulness in every movement, and rare were the exceptions in which beauty was not displayed in every lineament. And why was this? Simply because by the simplicity and activity of their mode of life, their bodies were kept in a healthy tone, and because they had not learned the baleful arts by which the belles of of our day are slowly but surely undermining their health, and so destroying their beauty and eventually their lives.

"I sometimes feel like weeping when I see young ladies going by on the pavements, dressed out in all the extravagance of fashion, yet with so much economy as to wear paper-soled gaiters, and indeed, to display scarcely any waist at all. Though they declare, when a friend remonstrates with them, that they 'are not the least bit uncomfortable,' yet one can easily see that they are in agony. How could it be otherwise when they are screwed up so tight that drawing a full supply of breath is an utter impossibility? I restrain myself from tears, however, by reflecting how useless it would be for me to give way to such a display of emotion, and how much more sensible it would be to laugh. Laugh? Oh! no. My conscience restrains me, as the terrible thought forces itself upon my mind that these poor creatures, in obedience to Flora McFlimsey's fiat, are putting themselves to a torture which sooner or later must end in their death, and that they are, therefore, suicides. What is the cause? Disappointed love? No. Insanity? Well, yes, a species of insanity, of which the technical name is Fashion. Only yesterday a man leaned up against me and read this notice:

"'Died—On the 10th inst., of a lingering illness, Miss Anna Bell, daughter of John and Sarah Bell, of this place. She was the reigning belle of our society, and leaves a large circle of mourning friends.'

"The villains, how they lie," was my silent comment. Instead of saying, "of a lingering illness," it should have been "of inordinate vanity."

"But I digress," as ministers sometimes say.

"Let me return to the place whence I started;"

as the young man said when he sat on his mother's knee. The family whose promises I overlooked consisted of John Jones, and Sarah his wife, to whom were added in due course of years, transcripts of themselves, four boys and four girls. The youngest of them, I well remember, in those early years was a bright, sunny haired, azure-eyed, rosy-cheeked little lassie named Sallie. I was going further to describe her by characterizing her according to her beautiful red lips, whose richness and whose sweet expression no painter could copy, but I find my stock of adjectives far too meagre to do justice to the subject. Sally Jones in her home-spun frock, clean course sunbonnet, and bare feet, was to me a far prettier sight than any of the little darlings who now trip by me daily on the pavement, trigged out in their modern finery. I have never seen another face so sweet as hers.

"'After all, a handsome face is a thing of very little consequence,' as the young lady said whose glass would not lie. The chief charm of little Sally Jones was not in her lovely face. Her gentle disposition, her loving heart, her ready obedience to her parents, and her endeavors to be good, these were what endeared the little girl to all who knew her. It was their recognition of these qualities that made the rough and uncouth backwoodsmen so kind and gentle in her presence. The ferocious lion licked the hand of the man who removed the thorn from his foot. The ickiest heart is melted by the warm sunshine of childhood's innocent love.

A Beauty.

It is universally conceded that our Gordon Job Press is the nicest piece of machinery ever brought to this town. Everybody that sees it, says it is a beauty.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of job work, such as Bill Heads, Letter Heads, Cards, Envelops, Shipping Tags, Paper Books, Play Cards, Programmes, Labels, Vendue Bills, and Posters of all kinds, at as reasonable rates as they can be printed anywhere outside our large cities.

We especially invite all persons who may desire job printing of any kind, to call at our office and give us a trial. It is our fixed determination to please our customers, and not to be surpassed in the character of our job work, by "water power" or any other establishments in the country.

"BRICK" AND "GRAY"—The darkey who used to work at a case by the side of Brick Pomeroy has been heard from. He writes to the Cleveland Herald that Brick owes him $2.70 borrowed money, and that he would starve before he would again "work at a case alongside of Brick Pomeroy." That's pretty severe on Brick.

We have no doubt but that negro is a better and more decent man than "Brick." One thing is certain, it will take the 15th Amendment with all its "negro equality" granting powers, to be in operation a long time, before it can make the negro, or any other, the equal of Brick Pomeroy, either as a blackguard or a wholesale liar. In our opinion, "Brick," in this respect, has no equals, black or white; but there is one P. G. Meek, who apes Pomeroy and comes as near equaling him as it is possible for a little devil incarnate to equal Beelzebub the old Prince.—"Brick" and "Gray!" They are a pretty pair—ain't they?

That Family Quarrel Again.

Two weeks ago we referred to a few of the facts relating to the quarrel between Maj. Wm. F. Reynolds and J. D. Shugert, Esq., over the spoils of the County Treasurer's office. Mr. Wolf, as we have since learned, swore that he was too good and pure a Democrat to deposit his money, or county funds, in any bank where there was any likelihood of the Black Republicans deriving any benefit from it, or them. Maj. Reynolds, hearing of the noble (?) stand Mr. Wolf had taken, set himself at work in good earnest to convince Mr. Wolf that he was a much better Democrat than Mr. Shugert—that he had no Republican partners, and very little aid or sympathy from members of the Republican party, and notwithstanding this fact, he had been a hard working and reliable Democrat; while his opponent, Mr. Shugert, might have at one time been a very good Democrat, it was very evident from his surroundings and associations that if he obtained the deposits, more than two-thirds of the benefits derived therefrom would go to black Republicans—men who had opposed Mr. Wolf's election, and fought him with all their ability all through the campaign. It was also intimated that Mr. Shugert himself was not favorable to the nomination of Mr. Wolf, and only supported him, after he was nominated, for the reason that he was the nominee of the party.

With these facts all brought to light, the fight commenced. The Maj. grew furiously angry; but knowing Wolf's antipathy for all Republicans, he kept as cool as an ice house, and as calm as a summer's evening. Not so with Mr. Shugert. He realized that the odds were against him, that Wolf had no sense, or, as he saw proper to express it "was unfit for the office, and a d—d fool besides," and that if he were to secure the deposits, it would only be through a fixed determination, cunning strategy, and the hardest kind of work. Shugert has the reputation of being shrewd, and good on a stragetic movement. The Maj. believed this to be true and therefore watched every movement.

Wolf was in a fix. First, he must run to see Mr. Shugert, then back to see the Maj.; now to the Treasurer's office; again back to Mr. Shugert, and so on ad infinitum until the sun went down in glorious golden tints, apparently rejoicing at Mr. Shugert's defeat.

But Wolf was aroused from his reveris next morning, by the astounding information that the Treasury was Bankrupt, and that his official check for $13,000 had been suffered, by his good Democratic friend Maj. Reynolds, to go to protest. What! exclaimed Wolf with the most ghastly contortions of countenance, 'Et tu Brute!' Am I, thus to be wounded and disgraced in the house of my friends, and by my friends? He looked woe-begone. He sighed—his bosom heaved—and again he sighed, and then as if by magic, he started to his feet as he thought of his musical friend, J. G. Meyer, who never fails to draw consolation from his me-fa-sol-la's, and Wolf sung:

And Jake finds consolation,
In singing do, ra, me;
Why Lord! must I be pnuished?
The cause I can not see.

Oh! soften Reynolds' heart I pray,
Teach "Lop" how to forgive,
Save those who do the taxes pay,
And struggle hard to live.

Great God, and must it ever be,
This Ring will rule and reign?
I wish I was in Pennsvally
My peaceful home again.

I always thought I was a man;
And not a simple fool;
Had nerve, and sinew, and backbone,
Too much to be a tool.

Oh! had I stuck to J. D. S——
Disgrace would not have come.
And Reynolds' would I rather guess
Gained time to raise the mon—

But so it is, and here am I
Poor, sick, disgraced, forlorn,
And every one who passes by
Say's, how has this wolf been torn?

I'm in a sorry plight I see.
Nor can I e're explain,
How much the people lost by me,
The first week of my reign.

For six per cent did Shugert say
The note he would discount;
But Reynolds' said it would not pay
He must have twice the amount.

Just here Mr. Wolf was interrupted by the Treasury door being thrown wide open, and the entrance of an intelligent but a huge two fisted taxpayer, who said, "Yes, you may well sing—you ought to be ashamed of yourself. I believe we have been worse sold in you than in J. G. Meyer. My honest opinion is, that all either of you know is to sing, and wear fancy shirt collars and kid gloves. I believe Bill Brown was right in all he said about either of you. This is a nice mix you have gotten us into."

"Hold, hold!" said Wolf, "what in the world is wrong?"

"You ask what is wrong," said the enraged taxpayer. "You know very well what is wrong. You have squandered over $500 of our money in one simple transaction. How can you explain this to our honest Pennsvalley farmers?"

"Why, why? said Wolf."

"Yes, why!" said the tax payer, "when you know as well as you know anything (that is if you know anything) that J. D. Shugert offered to discount a note of from $13,000 to $17,000 at 6 per cent. you preferred to take it to Maj. Reynolds and have it discounted at 12 or 15 per cent. Nor is this all—you must pay the expense of a protest and stand the disgrace, all because you have not the manhood to resist the mandates of the Ring, and work for the people's interests, instead of a few monied men composing said "Ring."'"

"You are too severe," said Wolf.

"But I am truthful," said the taxpayer.

"Bah!" said Wolf," this talk about the taxpayers may do well enough before the election; but"—

"Yes: but," said the taxpayer, "before the election we are good fellows; but so soon as the election is over and the victory won, our servants become our masters, and go to work at once to squander our money in the interest of the Ring."

Here Mr. Wolf became indignant at the impudence, as he said, of an ignorant farmer trying to teach him, and invited the taxpayer to step out, as he, Wolf, had official business with Major Reynolds.

"I want you to tell me," said the taxpayer, "before you go, how you explain, or what reason you give for throwing away five hundred dollars of our money in one transaction, the first week you are in office?"

But Wolf would not condescend to explain. The tax-payer left for home, swearing vengeance on the Court House Ring.

A STATE Convention of the Woman Suffrage party in Vermont will be held at Montpelier on the 2d and 3d of February, at which Mrs. Howe, Mrs. Livermore, Mrs. Stowe, Mrs. Garrison, Lilly Peckham, and others will speak. This will be followed by an active canvass of the State, preparatory to the May election, when the admission of women to the ballot will be submitted to the popular vote.

—Dr. Robert Breckinridge, who lately resigned his position in the Danville, (Ky.,) Theological Seminary, under stress of the Old School General Assembly, it is said how proposes to withdraw entirely from that Church. It is said, also, that the Presbyterians in Kentucky are very generally satisfied with the arrangement.

H. Bucher Swoope, Esq.,

As will be seen from the following which we clip from the Raftsman's Journal, H. B. Swoope, Esq., of Clearfield, has been appointed, by the President, to the position of U. S. District Attorney for the Western part of the State. No man in the State, in our opinion, is better qualified to fill the position, and we are confident there is no one more worthy. The Journal gives the following brief history of Mr. Swoope:

"President Grant, on the 16th inst., sent in to the Senate, the name of H. Bucher Swoope, Esq., of this place, for U. S. District Attorney for the Western District of Pennsylvania.

This appointment is well deserved. Mr. Swoope is not only a first-class lawyer, possessing the ability to discharge the duties of the office so as to promote the best interests of the Government, but he has been a zealous, earnest and most eloquent advocate of Republican principles. For many years past, especially during the dark years of the war, he canvassed the State in behalf of the Republican party, and his eloquent appeals, cogent arguments and untiring efforts, contributed largely to the success of our candidates.

Mr. Swoope was born in Huntingdon, Pa., in 1831, and is now thirty-eight years of age. He received a thorough classical education, studied law with Hon. John Scott, now U. S. Senator, and was called to the bar in 1852. In 1853 he settled in Clearfield and is now in the enjoyment of a very large and lucrative practice.

As a popular speaker, he has few equals, and, perhaps, no superior in the State. His manner is graceful, his voice is powerful, yet susceptible of every degree of modulation, his style ornate, but clear and logical, and the impression he makes on his audience always pleasing and convincing. In criminal cases, before a jury, he is one of the most effective speakers we have ever heard.

He has a large experience at the bar, having been engaged in very many grave and important cases. Our own people will not soon forget his conduct of the Commonwealth vs. Lena Miller who was indicted for poisoning her husband, where he was assigned by the Court to assist the District Attorney, and procured the first verdict ever rendered in America, where chemical investigation failed to find arsenic in the stomach. The experienced scientific experts brought here, paid him the high compliment of saying that it was the best tried case in which they had ever been called to testify. His recent defense of Morrison, where he almost wrested from the jury a verdict of murder in the second degree, when everybody supposed his client could not escape the gallows, and his prosecution of Ball for the murder of Job Smeath, who was convicted of murder in the first degree by the force of his concluding argument, with many other cases we might cite, all attest his superior ability as a criminal lawyer.

In the civil courts he has been no less successful. It is not long since he conducted a case in the United States Court, before Judge M'Candless, against some of the oldest and ablest land lawyers in the State, the trial of which lasted twenty seven days, and during which all the points he made to the Court were affirmed, and the verdict was in favor of his client. The land in dispute is worth a quarter of a million of dollars. His argument in the contested election case of Robeson vs. Shugert, made in the Hall of the State Senate, his annual appearance before the Supreme Court, where he has been uniformly successful, all bear witness to his ability and experience as a lawyer. We have every confidence that his duty to the Government will be earnestly and faithfully discharged, and that President Grant and the Senate, and the people of the district, will have no cause to regret his appointment.

HERE is a problem for workingmen to solve. If twenty men in a factory, mill, or printing office average thirty cents, a day for drinks, to what would the sum total amount at the end of five years? If any dullard is interested in the problem, we will give him a fair start by stating that the amount expended the first year would be $2,180.

—The National House of Representatives has passed, and the Senate will pass, if it have not already done so, a joint resolution to continue the tax on salaries, declaring the meaning of the act to be that the tax shall be collected until the end of the year 1870.

—Democracy is enlarging its platform. In New York, it proposes to repeal the humane statute which prevents cruelty to animals, and under which Mr. Bergh, and his Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has done a noble and beneficent work.

—Wisconsin has a powerful champion of the protective policy in the person of Mr. Charles Seymour, editor of the La Crosse Republican. He has participated largely in the debates of that section of the West, and with telling effect.

MORMON women have been holding a demonstration meeting. They protest against interference with their religion, and, if we construe their speeches rightly, would as leave see a fight as not.

—Mr. Schenck, chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, has notified the House that he expects to be ready in the early part of this week, to report the revised Tariff bill.

Gov. Geary's Inaugural Address.

After the band stationed on the platform had ceased playing, and the congratulatory cheers attendant upon the introduction of the Governor to the people by the Speaker of the Senate had subsided, His Excellency proceeded to deliver his inaugural address, as follows:

FELLOW CITIZENS:—Having been honored, a second time, by the voluntary suffrages of my countrymen as their choice for Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, I have, in the presence of God and of this assembled multitude, renewed the solemn and binding obligation required of me by law, to support the State and National Constitutions, and to perform with fidelity the duties devolving upon me as Governor. It shall be my constant aim and most earnest effort to observe the very letter as well as the full spirit, meaning and intent of the obligation I have just taken.

Deeply impressed with the most profound gratitude, I can but express my most hearty thanks to the good citizens of this Commonwealth for the generous confidence and partiality they have reposed in me by re-election to the most honorable and most responsible position in their gift. But knowing well their exactions and requirements of one who occupies a position so exalted, it is with extreme diffidence I again undertake responsibilities of such vast importance, which even the boldest and most gifted might hesitate to assume. And however determined may be my endeavors to realize the expectations of my friends in support of the right, and to battle against whatever, in my judgment, may be wrong, still I am conscious of the necessity for son e sustaining power, and, therefore, I unhesitatingly acknowledge my dependence upon the enlightened support and patriotism of my fellow-citizens, and my firm reliance upon the unerring wisdom and never failing aid of Him who controls alike the destinies of individuals and of nations.

The settlement of the vexed questions growing out of the armed conflict with treason, devolves a mighty responsibility on the loyal men of the land. Armed rebellion was signally crushed by the force of armed loyalty, and the government has triumphantly established its ability successfully to suppress domestic insurrection, however gigantic. The war itself has served to stimulate our people to fresh energies, and to the development of new enterprises. Our manufactories have multiplied, plenty has smiled upon our fields, and blessed the labors of the husbandman. Peace has restored our people to their homes and cheered our firesides. The rates of taxation have been reduced, and are entirely abolished upon real estate for the use of the Commonwealth.—Our State debt is being steadily and surely liquidated. Immense sums have been paid for pensions and other charities. The cause of education has advanced, and the institutions for the support and tuition of the soldiers orphans have been liberally supplied. Railroads have been constructed, and new material resources developed.—And thus our State and Nation are rapidly progressing in the attainment of those elements of greatness which have already placed our country in the foremost rank of the powers of the earth. The great railroad which binds our State to the Far West, and it in turn to the oriental nations, has been completed, and all our efforts to add to our material prosperity have been crowned with unparalleled success.

It was my privilege to announce from this stand, three years ago, the principles which would guide me in the administration of the office of Governor. At that time I dwelt upon and expressed my views in reference to all questions then occupying a share of public attention. I have since, from time to time, in messages to the Legislature, set forth the condition of the State, recommended such measures as I deemed expedient and calculated to advance her interests, and expressed my views upon the various topics of the day that were of State National importance. And having fully reflected thereon, I am the more confirmed therein, and know of no reason why I should not endorse and reiterate them as fully, on this occasion, as if I again promulgated them word for word. And now, acknowledging my responsibility in its broadest sense, as a representative, to my constituents, and considering the magnitude of the interests which have again been committed to my charge, I feel it is due to the people and incumbent upon myself, to refer them to the documents indicated, for an outline of the general policy which is intended as a guide for the incoming administration rather than encumber this address, or unnecessarily delay this audience with their repetition. I have no new pledges to make, but confidently refer to the record of my past life, as evidence at least of my zeal and devotion to the best interests of my State and country, and for the rectitude of my intentions. And although the ability which I bring to the discharge of such high duties may be limited, I shall confidently rely upon the kind indulgence of my fellow-citizens and upon a conscientious effort to uphold unblemished, and transmit untarnished to my successor in office, and to posterity, the fair fame and good name of our magnificent old Commonwealth.

Difficulties of no ordinary character constantly surround your Executive officer in the discharge of the many duties devolving upon him, concerning each of which there may be conflicting opinions. It being, therefore impossible to satisfy all, his only safeguard is to adopt, and act in accordance with those sterling and beneficent maxims to which the early fathers gave utterance, which have been sanctioned by wisdom and experience, and resulted in the rapid growth and prosperity of our institutions, and the liberty and happiness of our people.

The Constitution vests "the supreme Executive power" of the State in the Governor, and directs that "he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed." The supreme earthly authority recognized by us, therefore, is the law—the rightfully determined will of the people. "No citizen is so exalted as to be above, and none so low as to be beneath its power."—The Executive is as much the subject of the laws of the State as the humblest individual within its borders.—In pursuance of these principles, and in the execution of the laws, I have endeavored, during my term of office, faithfully to discharge every official duty with a full reference to my sworn obligation, and as I shall answer at the last great day.

It should be our earnest effort to faithfully discharge all our obligations and responsibilities, both as citizens and magistrates. We should cease to tolerate anything "as politically right, that is morally wrong," and actively proscribe the corruption which too frequently marks the administration of public affairs—an evil to which attention cannot too frequently or too forcibly be invited. No sign more certainly indicates the downfall of free institutions than the indifference of the people to the moral depravity of those in authority. All history warns us to hold to our integrity as we value our national existence. Forcibly impressed with these ideas, I call upon all legislators, and upon all other good citizens, and especially upon the conductors of the public press—the ever faithful sentinels of a free people—to aid in giving that tone to public sentiment which shall purify our State and relieve her from the reproach of even countenancing those who would make a traffic of their offices in violation of their obligations. Look to it well and closely, fellow-citizens, and begin at once to teach your servants that the "public will" must be obeyed, and that the "public weal" is the first object to be attained in a free government. If you permit speculators to enrich themselves out of the public Treasury, and at the same time corrupt the law-making branch of the government you pave the way to anarchy, you set the example which tempts to crime, and offer to the world an evidence, most conclusive, that self-government is a failure.

Owing to the many efforts on the part of free traders for the abolishment of the natural and wholesome protection now afforded to our home industry and to labor I consider it a subject which claims a portion of our time and attention. If our national industry and national productions, represented by thousands of factories, mines and other sources of labor, are to be preserved, there should be no reduction of duties which shall enable the underpaid and overworked population of the Old World to flood our States with the product of their mines and workshops at the cost of our destruction. The articles thus admitted would undersell the products of our artizans at our very doors, and our factories would be closed, as herefore, be similar causes. This will throw out of employment thousands of industrious men, and entail ruin upon them and their families, merely for the benefit, and aggrandizement of foreign manufacturer and capitalists. As soon as our industrial arms are paralyzed and competition is destroyed, the monopolist can command his own price, and it is thus clear that the policy of free-trade can never permanently benefit any country that will sanction its adoption. Impelled by every feeling of interest, humanity and justice for our artizans and laborers we should unhesitatingly set our faces against this heresy. We should, therefore, not only earnestly legislate for the benefit of capital, but for the toiling sons and daughters of our country. It should be our constant effort to improve their social condition, to advance their intellectual status, and above all to shield them from the destitution which is threatened by the enemies of protection to our industrial pursuits.

In my several messages to the Legislature I have taken occasion to refer to a subject which I regard as of paramount importance to the prosperity and even the stability of our Government. No nation can long exist that attempts to violate any of its obligations. The most prominent among these is the faithful payment of all its indebtedness. No good reason can be given for the repudiation of a single farthing. I said in my message of January, 1868, "The people of Pennsylvania, ever true to the Union, and unswerving in their determination to preserve its honor, integrity and perpituity, are proud and free to assert the sacredness of the national debt, and that its ultimate payment in full must be secured." In my message of 1869, I called attention to the same subject, in these words: "The voice of Pennsylvania, as well as that of a majority of the States, has, at the ballot-box, proclaimed to the world that all our national indebtedness, no matter how heavy the burden, will be paid according to the letter and spirit of the agreements made and entered into at the time the debt was contracted; and that in this, as in all respects, our individual and national honor must and shall be preserved." These sentiments, so clearly expressed, I have taken frequent occasion to reiterate, and it affords me great satisfaction to observe that many who have heretofore been hostile to, or silent on this most important subject, are becoming warm in their advocacy of the principles here enunciated.

Those who saved this Government from the destruction designed by treason, are they who will perpetuate it as a blessing for future generations. All that is asked of the people is to strengthen and uphold the hands of the men who have been called to do the work of reconstruction, and when that work is finished in the spirit in which it has been begun by the present National Administration, we will have a Government and a country mighty in their munificence, glorious in their prosperity.

The preservation of the peace and quiet of our country, maintaining unsullied our national honor, and the harmony of our Union are among our highest duties. Let us encourage every branch of home industry, advance the true interests of moral, physical and intellectual labor, and reaching forward to the prize of the manifest destiny of our glorious Commonwealth we may hope for her increasing prosperity, and above all, for the smiles of an approving Providence.

I earnestly invoke a continuance of the blessings and favors which we, as a people, have long enjoyed, that Pennsylvania may be ever ready to extend her sympathies to those struggling for liberty, to succor the helpless exile, and be an assylum to the persecuted and oppressed; and thus forever identify herself with the cause of equal rights, and with the interests of universal freedom, justice and humanity. Then can we with truth and pride proclaim, 'Long live the Commonwealth,' whose guiding principles are found in the motto of our State, "VIRTUE, LIBERTY AND INDEPENDENCE."

PITTSBURGH COMMERCIAL.

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

1870.

As a thorough newspaper, sparing neither labor nor expense to furnish the fullest and most reliable intelligence; as the fearless, consistent, and persistent opponent of corruption in office as advocate of Honesty, Economy, Retrenchment and Reform in public affairs; as the sworn foe of 'Rings" and every description of dishonest combination,—just as ready to expose their practices in the Republican as Democratic party, and even more so, because it holds that a party that will cast out offenders of this description entitles itself to the confidence of the people—as an Independent Republican journal, the advocate of the rights and interests of the people—The Pittsburg Commercial needs no introduction to the reading public.

IT IS A PROGRESSIVE PAPER,

And keeps up in the march of improvement and the development of ideas. Thoroughly alive to everything that is valuable or interesting, it identifies itself at once and heartily with whatever seems calculated to improve mankind and elevate the standard of intelligence and morality. As a Republican journal of the strictest sect, it deals with political questions with an earnest wish to get at the truth and place only good and capable men in office.

IT IS A PEOPLE'S PAPER,

And relies on their support and good opinion rather than the favors of political leaders. Nor has it done so in vain. Its independent course—more especially in denouncing legislative corruption and exposing the practices of thieves in office—has made it the favorite of the masses and the feared of the dishonest aspirants and debauched party leaders. Of the reputation it has earned in this respect it is sincerely proud; and it wishes no different standing in the field of journalism in this regard than a discriminating public promptly accorded to it. To prove faithful to their confidence and good opinion will be its constant endeavors.

IT IS A LIVE PAPER,

And ranks with the leading journals which are thoroughly awake to all that is going on. Its News Department is always fresh and full. Its editorials are written with a purpose in view. Its market Reports and Commercial News gatherings are meant to supply the most exacting demands of the business public.

IT IS A PROSPEROUS AND GROWING PAPER,

Having from the start gone ahead, outstripping older occupants of the field of journalism; and it has attained to a prosperity and come to exert an influence second to no paper in the State. That it has fairly won the rank of the first paper in Pennsylvania is the verdict of newspaper readers in general.

IT IS A PAPER OF INFLUENCE,

It being read more generally than any other Pittsburg paper by the business, professional and thinking classes. It is always found where the latest and fullest news is sought, and an independent paper prized,—in Banking Houses, Counting Rooms and the Family Circle, where it is welcomed as a business and is constant and increasing.

ITS PAST COURSE IS ITS BEST RECOMMENDATION,

And it is felt that there is no necessity for indulging in new professions or making fresh promises. It means, while adhering to its standard in politics and morals, to improve as it progresses, and omit nothing that will add to its strength or increase its usefulness.

THE NEXT YEAR.

The Commercial enters on another year strong and hopeful, and with a deliberate purpose consistent with what has been said above. And it does not hesitate to ask the co-operation of all who approve of that purpose. No hesitation is felt in saying that it desires this support in increasing its circulation and enlarging the sphere of its usefulness. The season is at hand when Congress and the Legislature will be in session, and stirring events at both the National and State Capital will be transpiring. The measures of the splendid administration of General Grant will soon be before the country—embracing questions of the deepest interest to every reader and taxpayer. The State Legislature, too, will present matters of interest. Abroad, things are animatting; and at home in the field of politics, popular movements relating to education and religious questions are appearing, of which no one should permit himself to be ignorant, and concerning which all that is essential to be known will be the aim of the Commercial to give.

JOB WORK.—Posters, Circulars, Bill Heads, Cards, Paper Books, Job Work of all kinds, neatly executed at the REPUBLICAN OFFICE, at reasonable rates.

OUR THANKS.—It is with pleasure we thank Hon. Wm M. Armstrong, Hon. Jno. Cessna, Hon. Simon Cameron and Hon. Jno. Scott for valuable public documents.

LEGISLATURE.—The members of the Legislature so far have occupied their time in preparing bills and in getting ready to do something. No important laws, as yet, have been passed.

LEVI A. MILLER.—The greatest sensation now in town, has been created by the remarkably low rates at which Levi A. Miller, is furnishing the people with Groceries, &c., at his new grocery store.

LECTURE.—Horace Greeley lectured last night to the largest audience ever assembled in Bellefonte to hear a lecture. The lecture was first class, but Horace does not claim to be a fluent speaker—an elocutionist.

CROSSINGS.—The street crossings have been almost impassible for the last ten days. Is it the fault of the town Council, the street Commissioner, or the remarkable spell of soft weather we are having? We know there is something very soft about our crossings and streets.

OYSTER HALL.—Robert Irwin has opened an Oyster Hall, in the room formerly occupied as the Central Press office, now the entrance to J. G. Kurtz Bowling alley. Robert Irwin is a young man of energy and deserves encouragement. He has his Hall fitted up in excellent style.

AMUSING.—We were quite amused one day last week, as we looked out of our Sanctum window, to see a young man from the country stop his team in front of Keller & Musser's excellent new store, with bucket in hand approached the fire plug, and spent full ten minutes in attempting to draw water from it for his horses. He found out his mistake at last. Had it been one of Pruner's new Hydrants he would have had no trouble.

VISIT.—Mrs. Sarah Dimick, of Henry County, Illinois, formerly Miss Sarah Lambert, of this Borough, arrived here on last Thursday night in company with her husband Mr. C. S. Dimick. Mrs. Dimick is looking hail and heatty and has with her two fine children a son and daughter. The West must be not only a healthy place; but also very prolific, and although we always feel sorry when any of our neighbors move West we cannot refrain from saying that if we thought all our pretty girls could go West and marry as well as did Miss Lambert, we would advise them all to move without delay.

THE Philipsburg Literary Society which was inaugurated two weeks ago is progressing under very favorable auspices. The debate on last Thursday evening, was upon the following resolution:

"That Card playing is a justifiable amusement." The disputants, on the affirmative were Messrs. Walker, Swartz, and Johnston; those of the negative were Messrs. Kline, Ellsworth and Foley. The debate was very spirited and resulted in the Judges deciding in favor of the negative.

A very beautiful essay was read by Miss Chrissie Swarts entitled "I can't and I'll try." The subject was fully elucidated by numerous examples. A large and appreciative audience was in attendance.

The society is increasing in numbers and bids fair to be one of the leading sensations in that progressive place.

THE Bellefonte Republican rejoices over the receipt of a new press in this wise: "The fact is and we think we are correct, that we have the only half medium Gordon in Central Pennsylvania." The fact is, that our friend is "muchly" mistaken. While we are gratified to learn of the prosperity of our friend, we would inform him that several, in this section, have been running for over a year.—Bloomsburg Republican.

We are really glad to learn that our Bloomsburg namesake is fortunate enough to own a Half-medium Gordon; because we infer from that fact that it must be in a very prosperous condition. We confess, however, that we were under the impression that we had the only Half-medium Gordon in Central Pennsylvania.

Our Bloomsburg friend the editor of the Republican gets up a strong and spicy paper, and we sincerely hope that he may live for many years to see the result of his labors, and to keep his Gordon jobber in constant motion.

AT a regular meeting of Howard Lodge No. 100, I. O. G. T., the following preamble and resolutions, submitted by a committee previously appointed for that purpose, were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased an all wise Providence to remove from our circle our esteemed sister Maggie E. Shank, by the hand of death; therefore

Resolved, That we recognize in this sudden decease of our sister the hand of Him who doeth all things well and are admonished of the necessity of preparation, for that event, to which we are all hastening.

Resolved, That while we deeply sympathize with her friends in this their bereavment, we rejoice that our sister though early called away from earth, has, we trust, found a happier home in Heaven.

Resolved, That the charter of this lodge be draped in mourning for the space of sixty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved friends, and that they be published in the county papers and the Key Stone Good Templar.

J. W. PACKER,
PHILIP STOUT,
R. V. BUTLER,
} Committee.

MITCHELL T. BAKER, Secretary.

MUMPS and Whooping-cough are prevailing in some parts of Nittany Valley. Scarlet Fever in Bald Eagle Valley.

COURT WEEK.—Court is in session this week. His Honor Judge Mayer arrived in town at 4 o'clock, on Monday. We presume the Potter "Will Case" will be tried this week.

DIAMOND DRUG STORE.—F. S. Wilson, of the Diamond Drug Store, is determined not to be surpassed by any in the place. He is constantly receiving from the city, fresh Drugs, Chemicals and fancy articles.

REVIVAL.—A series of religious meetings have been going on in the Lutheran church, in Boalsburg, for several weeks past. The meeting is still in progress. We understand that ten or twelve persons have attached themselves to the church. Let the good work go on.

THAT "Wycoff Pavement" which cost the borough almost three thousand dollars, now should have some more money spent on it to clear off dirt and rubbish. Of course ladies can wade through, but men often cross from the depot to town with both hands full, and then it is inconvenient for them to lift their coat tails to keep them clear of mud.

LOOK OUT FOR IT.—Next week we will publish a reply to the Howard letter, which appeared in our paper three weeks ago, from our own correspondent "Momus." The reply is from the pen of one of the injured, or rather criticized parties. It is right good. We think we can promise our readers some fun. Look out for it.

NEW BUILDING.—We understand that Messrs. Irwin and Wilson of Hardware fame have concluded to build a large three story building on Allegheny St., just opposite the store of Loeb, May & Loeb. They have already commenced hauling the brick. They are abundantly able to build, and to store it well with hardware after it is built. We wish them success.

RELIGION.—For the past three weeks religion has been the chief topic, for discussion in our town. The Rev. Wylie commenced a series of meetings immediately after the holidays and they have been continued from night to night in the Court House. Mr. Wiley is a very excellent, earnest and able minister. His whole soul is in the work. We have been informed that about 35 persons have attached themselves to the church.

NEW STORE.—By reference to our advertising columns our readers will see that R. H. Forster & Co., have opened a large and splendid stock of goods of all kinds, Groceries, &c., in the rooms formerly occupied by Bowell, Gilliland & Co.

Maj. Forster is a very clever man and will, we have no doubt take great pleasure in showing his goods and waiting upon his customers.

DR. RAGE'S Catarrh Remedy is no Patent Medicine humbug gotten up to dupe the ignorant and credulous, nor is it represented as being "composed of rare and precious substances brought from the four corners of the earth, carried seven times across the Great Desert of Saharah on the backs of fourteen camels, and brought across the Atlantic Ocean on two ships." It is a simple, mild, soothing, pleasant Remedy—a perfect specific for Chronic Nasal Catarrh, "Cold in the Head," and kindred diseases. The proprietor, R. V. PIERCE, M. D., of Buffalo, N. Y., offers a reward of $500 for a case of Catarrh that he cannot cure. For sale by most Druggists everywhere. Sent by mail, post paid, for sixty cents. Address the proprietor as above. v2n3 2t

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT.—Twenty-seven states have already voted upon the proposed Amendment. There are thirty-seven States altogether. It requires twenty-eight States to make the Amendment part of the Constitution. The assent of one more is all that is needed. Nebraska will certainly vote for it, and Texas cannot be fully restored to the Union until she first votes for the Amendment.

Governor Hoffman and his New York Legislature have not made much Ohio voted for the Amendment.

In a short time you will see Orvis and Meek and sundry other Democratic politicians offering to furnish free whiskey—and going to the polls arm in arm with the negro. But Sambo, free and a voter will have too much good sense to vote the Democratic ticket or drink their strychnine whiskey.

For the Republican.

IS IT TRUE?—In the published proceedings of the annual session of the Centre County S. S. Association recently held at Rebersburg, Gen. Beaver, of this place, is reported as having said:

"A very large number of the present "S. S. Libraries, are composed of Books "of an utterly, and indeed, viciously "worthless character."

We have always been a warm friend of Sunday Schools, innocently thinking that from them the best and most lasting impressions were impressed on the youthful mind, consequently our children have been regular attendants of them. But, if what Gen. Beaver says be true, the less they and other children attend Sunday Schools, the better men and women they will make when they arrive at maturity.

But we do not believe Gen. Beaver's statement, and are inclined to the opinion that this is one of the many instances in which the Gen. permitted his zeal to overcome his judgement. We profess to have some knowledge of the character of our Sabbath School literature and we are happy to state that, taken as a whole, in our opinion it cannot be improved upon. We are at a loss to know Gen., why this wholesale slaughter of the innocents? Do you not perceive Gen., what a weapon you have, innocently we hope, placed in the hands of the infidel?

D. S. DUNHAM.

PROCEEDING OF THE WEST BRANCH DISTRICT CONVENTION, I. O. G. T.—Being the Quarterly convention met in the M. E. church, at Howard, January 18th, 1870. Philip Stout, D. W. C. T.; W. Allison, jr, D. W. Brother, J. H. McMinn, R. C. Nelson and J. L. Butler, were a committee on business and Reported the following, viz:

Resolved, That for the good of the order, such instructions and suggestions be given to the members of the order that may tend to reinvigorate the weak lodges and encourage all to renewed energy in promoting the general interests of our order besides giving instructions in the unwritten work. The convention then adjourned to 6½ o'clock.

Evening sessions opened with prayer by Brother Chaplain.

Addresses were delivered by the following persons:

Brothers, Nelson, McGhee, R. V. Butler, T. F. McClure, J. H. McMinn, E. S. Dorsworth and Philip Stout. Adjourned.

Wednesday Morning, session met at 9 o'clock, a. m. Minutes of previous session read and adopted.

Resolved, That hereafter, when invitations are tendered the convention for future meetings, it be understood that the delegates in attendence are to be entertained by the lodge visited.

LAND AND INSURANCE AGENCY.—We invite the attention of our readers to the business card of Samuel L. Barr and E. H. Kinsloe—Barr & Kinsloe—in another column. These gentlemen have opened a Land and Insurance Agency, in the room adjoining the Centre County Banking Co., where we are informed they are doing a fine business. Mr. Barr has the reputation of being one of the best business men in the country and his partner Mr. Kinsloe has energy enough to move a mountain. Call and see them.

Died.

STEAR—On the 17th inst., at Unionville, Mary Jane Stear, consort of Jos. Stear, aged 39 years, 6 month, and 11 days.

Once more we have been called to look upon death and to be again assured by the great unerring law of Nature, that our earthly career must soon be numbered with the things that were. The subject of these remarks had been a great sufferer for nearly two years, and it was often said, "how patiently she bears it." Yes, patiently—that devoted wife, and loving mother, passed through pains and agony known but to her, and through all, her countenance bore the impress of one whose mission on earth had ended, and could say: husband, children—farewell—a new life awaits me, where all is, beautiful and true. Thus passed away one who was beloved while with us, and, gone we revere her memory. X.

COMPLETION OF THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

GREAT RUSH TO STERNBERG'S.

Sung to the Tune of Yankee Doodle.

The Great Pacific Railroad's laid,
From ocean unto ocean,
And now comple connection's made,—
An enterprising notion.

The mighty work at last is done,
So speedily and brisk, oh!
And now in ten days we can run
From here to San Francisco.

No more we take the ancient route,
The stage, a horrid slow thing;
It banged the passengers about,
And wore out all their clothing.

CHORUS, for the end of each verse:

The Great Pacific Railroad's laid,
From ocean unto ocean,
And we buy clothes from A. STERNBERG,
A most delightful notion.

Through passengers by the Pacific Railroad will call at the store of A. Sternberg, before starting, and provide themselves with a complete outfit of the elegant and substantial Spring and Summer Clothing, the very best assortment of which will always be found at A. Sternberg's Store.

People who travel by other routes, and also people who, instead of traveling by any route at all, prefer to stay at home, can find the most superior and seasonable garments, for every occasion, of every variety, and at the lowest prices.

Do not fail to call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere, if you do not, we are sure you will be sorry that you did not. Our goods are put down to the lowest figure. We sell whole suits, according to quality,

WEDNESDAY MORNING Jan. 26, '70

Select Poetry.

WOUNDED.

Steady, boys, steady!
Keep your arms ready!
God only knows whom we may meet here.
Don't let me be taken,
I'd rather awaken,
To-morrow, in—no matter where,
Than lie in that foul prison-hole over there.
Step slowly!
Speak lowly!
These rocks may have life!
Lay me down in this hollow,
We are out of the strife.
By heavens! the foeman may trask in blood,
For this hole in my breast is outpouring a flood.
No! no surgeon for me—he can give me no aid;
The surgeon I want is the pickaxe and spade.
What, Morris, a tear! why, shame on ye, man!
I thought you a hero; but since you've began
To whimper and cry like a girl in her teens,
By George! I don't know what the devil it means!
Well! well! I'm rough; 'tis a very rough school,
This life of a trooper—but yet I'm no fool!
I know a brave man, and a friend from a foe:
And boys, that you love me, I certainly know.
But wasn't it grand,
When they came down the hill over sloughing and sand?
But we stood—did we not?—like immovable rock,
Unheeding their balls and repelling their shock.
Did you mind that loud cry,
When, as turning to fly,
Our men sprang upon them, determined to die?
Oh! wasn't it grand!
God help the poor wretches who fell in that figet,
No time was there given for prayer or for flight;
They fell by score in the crash, hand to hand,
And they mingled their blood with the sloughing sand.
Hurza!
Great heavens! this bullet-hole gapes a grave;
A curse on the aim of the traitorous knave!
Is there never a one of ye knows how to pray,
Or speak for man as his life ebbs away?
Pray!
Pray!
Our Father! Our Father! Why don't you proceed?
Can't you see I am dying? Great God, how I bleed!
Ebbing ayway!
Ebbing away!
The light of the day
Is turning gray.
Pray!
Pray!
Our Father in Heaven—boys, tell me the rest
While I staunch the hot blood from this hole in my breast:
There's something about a forgiveness of sin,
Put that in! put that in!—and then
I'll follow your words and say an amen.
Here, Morris, old fellow, get hold of my hand!
And, Wilson, my comrade—oh! wasn't it grand
When they came down the hill like a thunder-charged cloud,
And were scattered like mist by our brave little croud?
Where's Wilson—my comrade—here, stoop down your head;
Can't you say a short prayer for the dying and dead?
"Christ God, who died for sinners all,
Hear thou this suppliant wanderer's cry;
Let not e'en this poor sparrow fall
Unheeded by thy gracious eye,
Throw wide thy gate to let him in,
And take him pleading to thy arms:
Forgive, O Lord his lifelong sin,
And quiet all his fierce alarms."
God bless you, my comrades, for singing that hymn,
It is light to my path, when my sight has grown dim,
I am dying—bend down, till I touch you once more—
Don't forget me, old fellow—God prosper this war—
Confusion to enemies!—keep hold of my hand—
And float our dear flag o'er a prosperous land!

From the Germantown Telegraph.

How Draining may Cost Nothing.

"How much would it cost to drain my meadow? said one of my easy-going neighbors to me the other day, as I was digging a four feet drain through a piece of swamp. And this was the answer I gave him—answering his question Yankee fashion, by asking another.

Said I, "Do you not have a good many days, or parts of days, during the summer, when it rains a little too much to plow, but just enough to go fishing?" I had hardly finished the question when he said goodnaturedly, "I guess you have got it just about as it is." It did not take him long to see that he had sat idle in the village store, since he had owned his farm, long enough to have well drained his six acre lot and have it worth now ten times its present value, and that without hiring a single day or neglecting any of his regular farm work.

Any one who has learned by experience the advantage of draining, will see a great deal of land that needs it whenever he rides among the farms of his neighbors. If he tells the owners of undrained land that their farms need draining, they will say "I know it, but it would cost so much I could not afford it." Now my easy-going friend alluded to above is not the kind of man I am writing this to benefit. He loves to drink beer better than to dig a ditch.

I am satisfied there are a great many farmers however who would do some good jobs at draining if they knew how and where to begin, and if they could find the time. Many farmers do most of their work themselves, only hiring a little by the day at the busy seasons, and of course pay a round price for it. If they would hire by the month they could of course get the men much cheaper, as the day laborer has to get pay for the idle days by charging extra prices for the days he works. My advice and practice has been to hire help and give constant employment for the time agreed upon. Then when there is no regular farm work pressing I commence a drain. I begin at the lower end and work up-hill, keeping the bottom nearly level till I get a depth of four feet, then keep it not less than that depth, letting the water run off behind me. This ditch-digging I keep as knitting-work, as it can be taken up at any time when there is nothing else to do, and can be left as readily. If I have any haying to do and do not wish to start the machine till the dew is off, I say to my man, "You may go to your knitting work till I call you." If a shower stops work on the hay, or if it is too wet to hoe or I have fust finished some job and do not want to begin another today, I say "We will dig in that drain till chore-time."

If I am going away with the team I let my man dig in the ditch. Indeed, I have found a great many days when I should have had nothing for a man to do had I not had a piece of draining on hand. Then again, had I not had a steady hired man, my regular farm-work would have suffered severely at times. So the plan seems to work well all around. The man is sure of constant employment and gets as much in a month as if he worked by the day, and I get more work for the same pay, and the man is just as well satisfied. He makes more time, but runs no risk of being unemployed.

I have done some jobs at draining that perhaps would have cost more than the land is now worth if I had hired it all done at common days wages. But as it has been done at odd times, when I should perhaps have thought it was not just the right kind of weather to hoe, but just the kind to go fishing, I really think I may reckon it has cost almost nothing.

This kind of draining I recommend for small swales that are now worthless and are giving no income except a little bedding hay. When the fall is sufficient and small stones are plenty that need to be put out of the way somewhere, they may be used for drains with advantage. I have done all my draining with stones. If I were on a clay farm, and wanted to drain it all at once and had the capital to do it with, I should probably use tiles and do it in a more business-like way.

Wear of Farm Implements.

When will we ever rest from our excessive haste and carelessness, and learn to do things thoroughtly. An English exchange tells us that their wagons and implements last 25 years, while ours do not last over five or ten. Where is the difference? Are our merchanics poorer, or are they too hasty, or do farmers fear to pay enough for first-class work?

"In Ameriea everything in the way of implements and tools wears out very quickly; and harness, as well as every kind of leather or cloth, tears soon after it is new and very soon afterward. When I was about 14 years old, I learned to hold plow with a low-handed wooden handle that my father had when he commenced farming, before I was born. And 15 years afterward this plow was still in existence, having had anew beam, and perhaps handles too, in the time; but, being a very handy and favorite implements, it was kept in repair for the youngest plow boys to go with. He bought a winnowing machine by Cooch, just after he was in business; and, although he had great quantities of grain to winnow (at least 6,000 or 7,000 bus. per year), and lent it to winnow thousands of bushels for other people, that machine made more than half its cost price after nearly thirty years of wear.

Carts and wagons, though constantly used, last a very long time in England, and almost everything on a farm is made to wear well; while in America they are chiefly made for sale, and will be in need of repair in a few days. Half the wagons and dung carts in England are at least a quarter of a century old; and the same may be said of other implements; and an eighth of all the tools, etc., in existence had their origin fifty years since. They are not taken better care of than here, nor are they used less—but on the contrary, a great deal more; for there is as much plowing done on 500 acres of arable land in England as there is on 1,500 in America, and as much grain grown on 500 acres as there is on 3,000. So that the wear and tear in England does not take effect it does here, because good wood and iron are used, and good work made."

SUGAR BISCUIT.—The weight of six eggs in finely-pounded loaf sugar, and four in fried flour; beat separate the whites and yolks, with the yolks beat the sugar for half an hour, then add the whites and the flour, and a little grated nutmeg, lemonpeel, or pounded cinnamon. Bake them in yellow teacups, or drop them npon paper, as the French biscuits.

Gas tar mingled with whitewash applied to the interior of a hen-house at the rate of one gill to a pailfull, it is said will disperse the lice.

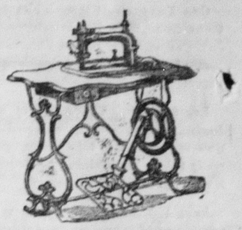
SEWING MACHINES.

AMERICAN BUTTON-HOLE
OVER SEAMING AND SEWING MACHINE COMBINED.
MEDAL AWARDED AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION, 18



In directing attention to the celebrated COMBINATION BUTTON HOLE AND SEWING MACHINE, we feel fully warranted in claiming for it unquestionable superiority over all others as a Family Machine.—The Simplicity, Ease and Certainty with which it operates, as well as the uniform excellence of its work, certainly place it far in advance of any other similar invention of the age.
It is also the cheapest, intrinsically, as well as the best, since it is really two machines combined in one, (by a simple and beautiful mechanical arrangement never before accomplished by human ingenuity,) making either the Lock Stitch or Button Hole Stitch, as occasion may require. It is, at the same time, simple in construction, comparatively noiseless, easily understood, and, in a word, it combines with those advantages exclusively its own the most desirable qualities of all others, for it not only does every variety of sewing in a SUPERIOR MANNER, but in addition OVERSEAMS splendidly and makes beautiful BUTTON and EYELET HOLES in all fabrics. This is far beyond the capacity of any other machine.
The SPLENDID MECHANISM of this Machine, and the superior skill workmanship and materials employed in its construction, are a guarantee of accuracy, strength and durability, and enable the company and its agents to Warrant Every Machine they sell to give entire satisfaction.
INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN ON THE MACHINE GRATUITOUSLY.
Lessons may be taken if desired with a view to test the Machine, or to become better acquainted with it before deciding to purchase. Samples of work will be furnished upon application at

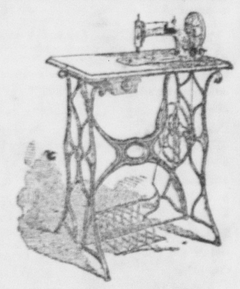
SEWING MACHINE.
THE SINGER SEWING MACHINE



Among sewing machines, those made by the Singer Manufacturing Company, rank with the highest. Their manufacturing machines, have long been known as the best for manufacturing purposes. But within the past few years, they have given special attention to the production of a
FAMILY MACHINE,
destined to win much favor in the
HOUSEHOLD.
The machine which they now offer is quiet light-running, simple, fast, noiseless. Its accessories for
HEMMING, BRAIDING, BINDING,
QUILTING, TUCKING, CORDING,
FELLING, GATHERING,
are simple and easily understood. Its delicate though enduring and tireless muscles of iron and steel, do all the work noiselessly, better, and few will deny, "Faster than hand can do it." They urge those wishing to purchase a machine, to examine all the other manufactures before buying, as it will, if itself overcome all the objections to the other machines that can be brought against it. Machines on hand for sale and exhibition, together with a full and complete assortment of
SILK, TWIST, LINEN, OR COTTON THREAD and the attachments for the machines, by
W. W. MONTGOMERY, Ag't.
